

Nirel Levi, Partner

Nirel is currently a portfolio manager at 32 Ventures, the family office of Robert Wolf. She has been with 32 Ventures for over half a decade and has been engaged in sourcing, vetting, structuring, funding and managing transactions in the private and public markets including PIPEs, debt facilities and venture deals.

Nirel is also a managing partner at Strategic Worldviews. Strategic Worldviews is a one-of-a-kind by-invite membership platform providing bi-partisan economic insights to hedge funds, money managers and global banks by top economists.

She is a team member of 100K Ventures, a Flint, Michigan startup accelerator, built to help underserved entrepreneurs alongside Michael Strahan, Victor Cruz, Mayor Michael Nutter and Draymond Green, to name a few. She was a David Rockefeller Fellow at the Partnership for New York City, which was dubbed the "the most connected organization in NYC", where she was chosen alongside only 30 professionals as the next generation of New York City business leadership.

Originally from Israel, where she served for 4 years in the Israeli military, she became the first female officer of a 50 soldier platoon, southern division. Nirel has 8 years' experience as an entrepreneur. She also has 2 years' experience on an investment banking M&A team with a focus on TMT. Additionally, Nirel has served as a consultant on the securitization / structured finance team at Deloitte.

She graduated the City University of New York at the top of her class, gave the honors commencement speech and served on the Board of Trustees. Along the way she has won several accolades including awards for leadership from the Israeli Defense Forces; awards for entrepreneurship; and a special recognition from the City University of New York, Lehman College.

Furthermore, Nirel is very involved in her community and participates in several non-profit organizations. She is an avid long-distance road cyclist.
